

Tackling the climate crisis: Integrating climate change into every-day teaching and taking action as a school

Has your school declared a climate emergency but doesn't know where to start?

Are you keen to increase pupils' awareness of rising temperatures and shrinking ice within the Arctic, and what impact that might have in the UK and globally?

How might you teach about climate change in a cross-curricular way that also creates a safe space for pupils to explore this complex topic?

If you feel you haven't received adequate training to educate students about climate change, or just want a refresher and some new ideas, then why not attend a WWW CPD workshop?

The workshop aims to give teachers the confidence and tools to explore climate change with students, and to take actions as a school. It will:

- 'unpick' the National Curriculum at Key Stages 1 and 2 and highlight how and where climate change and sustainability fits into different subjects and topics
- showcase contemporary, easy-to-use resources including a 'knowledge-rich' scheme of work - 'Let's go on an awesome Arctic Adventure'
- support action planning and sharing best practice to create a plan for your next steps back at your school
- provide you with further information, web-links and free resources.

Who is the training for?

The workshops are aimed at Primary School Key Stage Coordinators, Geography/Humanities Subject Leaders, Key Stage 1 and 2 class teachers, NQTs and trainee teachers.

The facilitator

Gill Johnson is the Director of Wicked Weather Watch. Having worked in the international development sector for 15 years, she left to run WWW five years ago. Combining her facilitation experience and knowledge of climate change, she is passionate about our natural world and empowering pupils and teachers alike to make a positive difference.

Participant Feedback

‘Well-resourced ideas and clear focus to National Curriculum objectives within an exciting topic – Arctic.’

‘Excellent opportunity to talk about resources and share ideas.’

‘Inspiring; resourceful; great mix of information and opportunity to talk; helpful; real life.’

‘Very informative and fabulous. Thank you!’

‘I’m leaving feeling inspired and excited to teach geography. It has been so useful to have the time to sit and talk, share ideas and plan for next year. I’ve got lots of new resources to use! Thank you very much!!’
